Bianco Romano is quarried in a bedrock quarry in the state of Espirito Santo, Brazil. The overall tone will change with each shipment due to the fact that at the top of the quarry, the blocks have been stained from water run off over millions of years and will have a light cream color. As they go deeper in the quarry, the color becomes much whiter. Burgundy veins are common in this granite with a variety of differing patterns. Due to the qualities of the stone, the slabs are book-matched; meaning slab one and slab two will be cut and polished to create a mirror image of each other. These are then kept in sequence, which allows for a consistent flow in pattern. During the polishing process, an epoxy resin is applied to the surface of the stone to fill in any natural pits, cracks or fissures that may exist. This does not affect the durability, maintenance or beauty of the stone. It is possible for some of the more minute pits that are too small to effectively hold the resin, to reopen during other finishing stages. However, this will not detract from the overall quality or appearance of the stone. There will be noticeable variations in color and movement between pieces. Therefore, it is important and recommended that a range of this product be viewed before finalizing a purchase. As a natural stone product it is recommended that it be sealed to extend its longevity.

NSF indicates this product conforms to the requirements of NSF/ANSI Standard 51, thereby meeting the health and sanitation requirements for materials used in areas of food preparation.
